INTRODUCTION

THE leading newspapers of the United States, editors, illustrators, sketch writers, librarians, statisticians and historians often have use for and have demanded photographs and data concerning Kentuckians who have attained prominence in the many vocations. To supply them in a form that will be immediately available, we decided to publish this PRESS REFERENCE BOOK OF PROMINENT KENTUCKIANS. We have, we feel assured, presented within these pages the portraits of a great number of the men who have made their mark in Kentucky's professional, political, manufacturing, financial, commercial and social life. It brings together at one view the faces of so many who are worthy representatives of their fellowmen. In no way can such a comprehensive and pleasurable view of them, their just fame, their virtues, executive ability and accomplishments be obtained, except in a work like this.

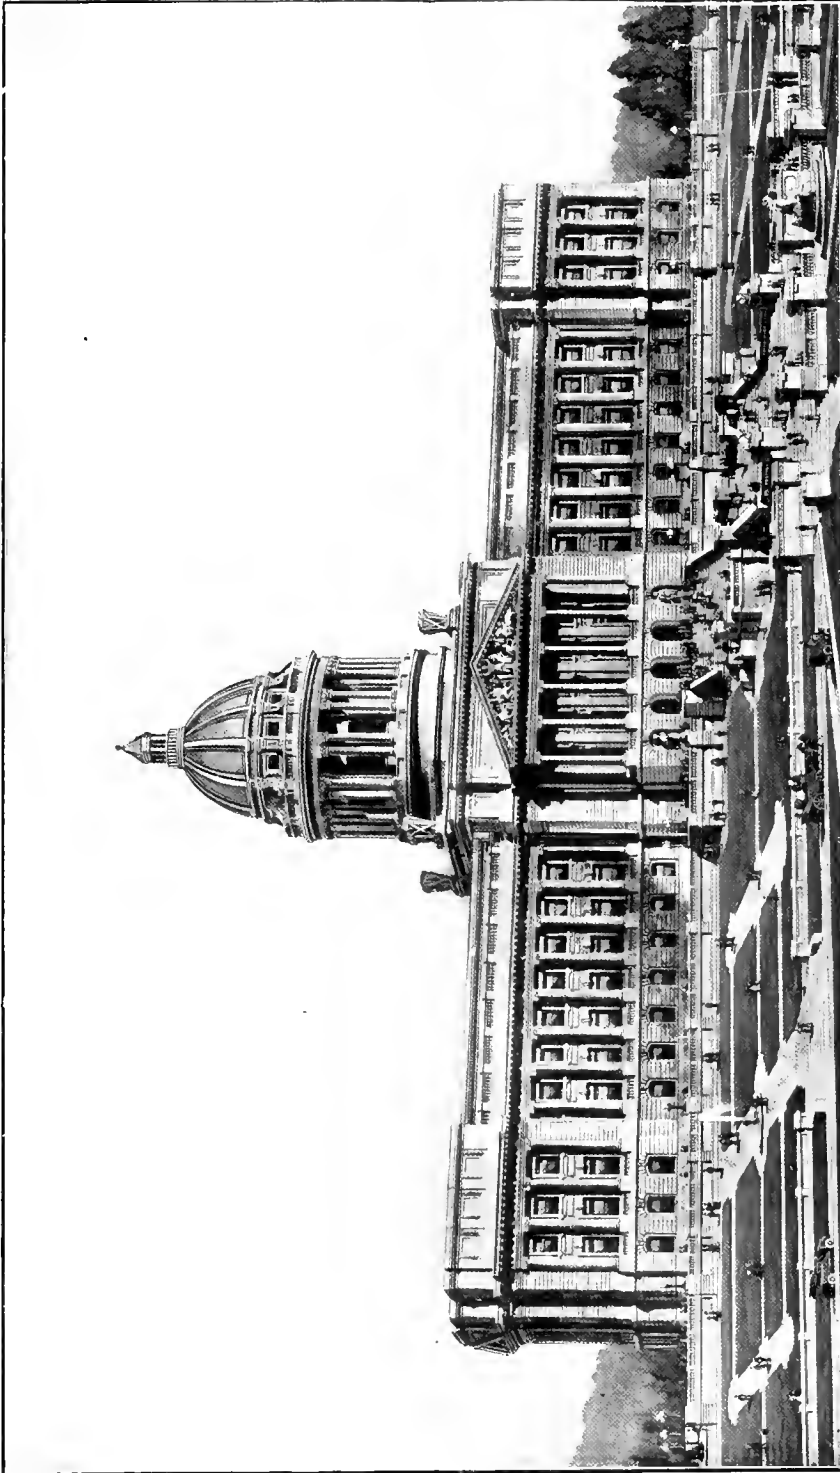

No expense or labor has been spared to make the work a creditable one. The printing of a book like this, aside from the great amount of labor bestowed in the collection of its subjects and their arrangement, is a notable undertaking for any publishing house. The press work must be first-class and accurate, and most perfect register and impression are absolutely necessary to bring out the artistic features, hence only the finest and most perfect presses must be used.

The printing, composition and arrangement was done by the STANDARD PRINTING COMPANY, Louisville, Ky. The style of its execution speaks for itself, and will bear the inspection of the most critical connoisseur on the art of book-making.

In addition to being in the homes and offices of those whose portraits and biographies are in the book, and in the possession of the leading newspapers of the United States, it will be sent to the most prominent libraries and clubs in the country, thus giving it a social interest in addition to its usefulness as a reference book, and of value as a compendium of the men now leaders in Kentucky affairs, and one that all subscribers will preserve for themselves and families.

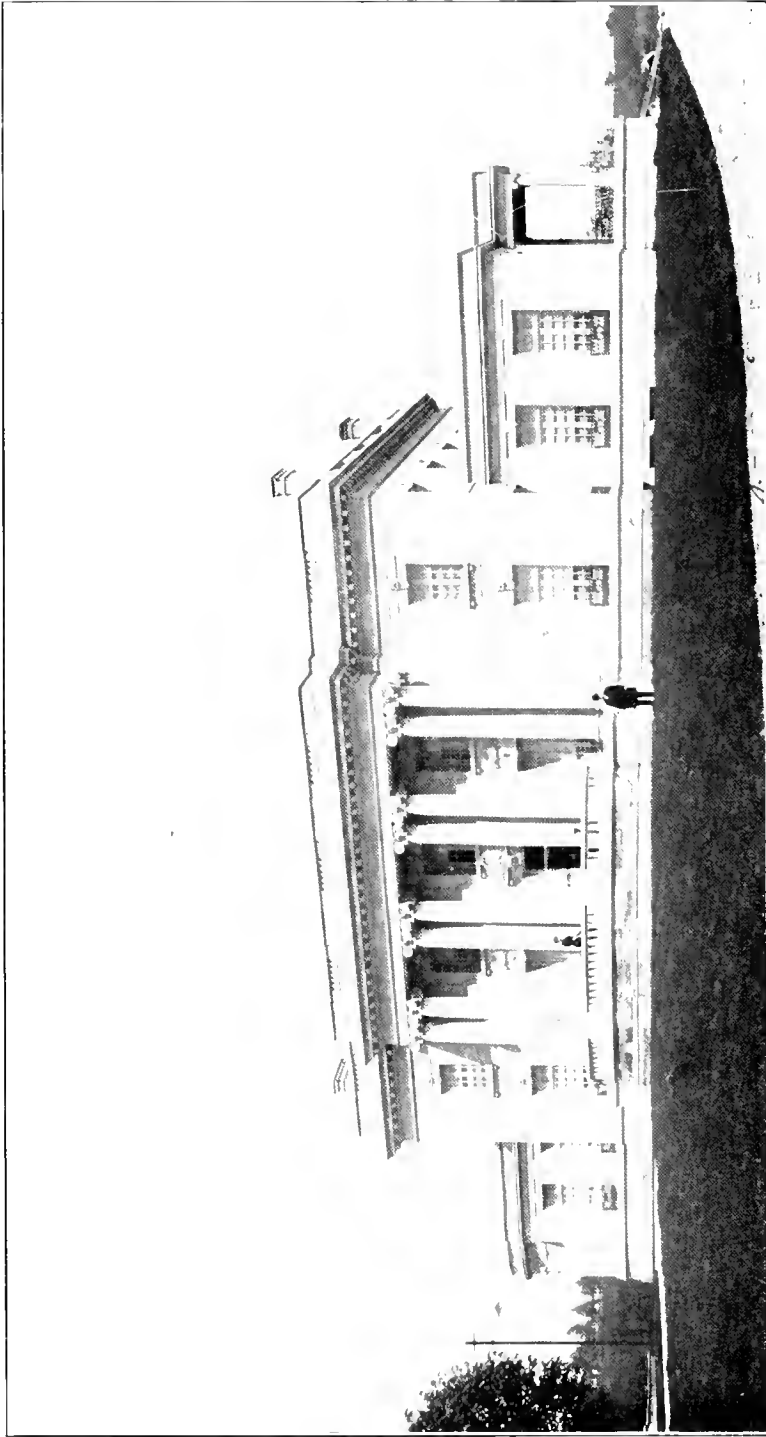

The Editor and publishers take this method of acknowledging their indebtedness to the public-spirited citizens of the Commonwealth, and to Standiford, Steffen and Cusick, the leading Photographers of the State for their valuable aid and hearty co-operation in the publishing of this book.

THE EDITOR.

KENTUCKY STATE CAPITOL, FRANKFORT.

On the crest of a gently rising hill in Frankfort, Ky., with the beautiful Kentucky River winding through undulating lowlands at its base, the new Capitol stands a monument to a progressive Commonwealth and to its designers and builders. The building is of the French renaissance architecture, with the neo-classic feature of the dome, which characterizes the general design of State Capitols. In size the building is 402 feet 10 inches east and west and 180 feet through central pavilion north and south, these figures being exclusive of the terrace walls, which add some 40 feet each way. From terrace to walk to top of center pavilion is 80 feet; to lantern on top of dome, 210 feet. The site cost $40,000; the building, $1,250,000; power plant and equipment, $90,000; for the architectural terrace and landscape work of the grounds, $115,000, making a total cost of $1,750,000. Preliminary work of clearing and excavating for the site was begun on May 25, 1905; in August and September, 1909, the State officials occupied their offices in the building. In 1910 the General Assembly held its first meeting in the new building, and in June of the same year the formal dedication took place, on which occasion United States Senator W. O. E. Bailey was the principal orator. Architects, F. M. Andrews & Co., Superintendent of Construction, C. M. Eileenor.

MONUMENT OF GOVERNOR WILLIAM GOEBEL
Erected in front of the New State Capitol, Frankfort, Ky.

The monument was erected under authority of an Act of the Legislature of March 25, 1904, appropriating $20,000, by a commission composed of Governor J. C. W. Beckham, Lieutenant-Governor Wm. P. Thorne, Auditor S. W. Hager and Treasurer Henry M. Bosworth, who were in office at the time the act was passed. A contract was entered into with Henry Niehaus, of New York, the famous sculptor, who completed a model which was accepted on October 10, 1910, but the work was not completed until June, 1914, some delay being occasioned by a defect in the base, which was replaced. The statue is of heroic size, 10 feet high, and is of bronze. The monument was dedicated, by appropriate ceremonies, March 11, 1914. The late Senator Walker Hall acted as master of ceremonies; Miss Margaret McCord, daughter of Hon. C. C. McCord, unveiled the monument; Col. Eph Lillard and Senator George G. Speer acted as marshals of the day. The Rev. T. F. Talaferro conducted the religious exercises, and the following speakers paid tribute to the life and character of Governor Goebel: Governor James B. McCreary, former Governor J. C. W. Beckham and Congressman (now Governor) A. O. Stanley. The committee in charge of the affair was composed of Senators W. C. Zimmerman, M. O. Scott and G. G. Speer; Representatives Harry J. Meyers, Shelton M. Sautley and Mat S. Walton; Elwood Hamilton and Louis B. Treman. Justus Goebel, Miss McCord, former Lieutenant-Governor Wm. P. Thorne and Eph Lillard sat at the bar of the house during the ceremonies.

INSCRIPTIONS ON THE MONUMENT.

Facing North.

GOVERNOR WILLIAM GOEBEL.

The able and most effective advocate and champion of the people's cause, their loved and loyal friend.

On January 30, 1900, he was shot down by an assassin from the private office of the then Secretary of State.

Born January 4, 1856.

Died February 3, 1900.

"Tell my friends to be brave and fearless and loyal to the great common people."— His last words.

Facing East.

"I would be blind if I did not see the devotion that has been manifested towards Senator Goebel. I would be blind if I did not recognize how earnest is his purpose. When I remember that Mr. Goebel entered the State Senate at the age of thirty-one and has been there twelve years, and that a lawyer of his acknowledged ability while serving in the Senate was never charged with abandonment of the plain people or with being a hireling of the corporations, and when I remember that even his enemies admit he never prostituted his ability for greed, I can understand how the plain people look at him as the champion of their rights."

William Jennings Bryan, Covington, Ky., October 18, 1899.

MONUMENT OF GOVERNOR WILLIAM GOEBEL

Erected in the Cemetery, Frankfort, Ky., during the Summer of 1908.

The money to build the monument was raised by the people of Kentucky, who lovingly contributed amounts ranging from 25 cents to $25; the total cost was $21,500. The monument is of Barre, Vermont, granite. It was contracted for with William Adams & Sons, Lexington, Ky. The monument is 17 feet 2 inches square at the base and 11 feet 6 inches in height, surmounted by a bronze statue 10 feet in height. Whole height of monument and statue 21 feet. There were three carloads of the monument. It required sixteen horses to haul some of the blocks. The statue is of bronze and came from the studio of the famous sculptor, Charles H. Niehaus, New York. The Monument Executive and Building Committee was composed of the following-named persons: Governor James B. McCreary, chairman; ex-Gov. J. C. W. Beckham, Gen. David L. Murray, Lewis McQuown, Dr. E. E. Hume, Arthur Goebel, Mrs. C. C. McCord, Mrs. Ida Finnell, Mrs. Charles Lewis and Miss Sally Jackson, secretary. Arthur and Justus Goebel, brothers of the lamented Governor, bought the lot in which the monument is erected. The appointed trustees of the lot are Mrs. Jennie C. Morton and Miss Sally Jackson. The monument is erected to face the west, hence the statue will be looking toward the old State Capitol building at the foot of the long cemetery hill.

On the front of the base on the west side is carved:

GOVERNOR WILLIAM GOEBEL

Born January 4, 1856.
Died February 3, 1900.

"Tell my friends to be brave and fearless and loyal to the great common people."—His last words.

"We lift thy name on high
And place thy crown with martyrs there,
Who dared for truth to die,
Thy memory shall be consecrate,
Thy monument shall be
A shrine of patriots' deathless love
And loyalty to thee."

(This complement was composed by Mrs. Jennie C. Morton, Frankfort, Ky.)

On the south side of the base are carved two quotations of advice given to his friends. They are:

"Be calm;
Abide by the law."

"Forgive them,
They do not understand."

On the east base is cut:

Erected by
The People of
Kentucky and Other States
In Memory of
Kentucky's Martyr Governor
William Goebel,
Who Devoted and Gave
His Life
In Defense of
The Rights of the People.

The fourth, the north side of the base, contains this inscription of his principal work while a member of the State Senate:

Author of
The Anti-Lottery Law.
The Pioneer in
American Railway Rate
Regulating Legislation.
The Champion of School-Book Legislation.

COL. EDMUND HAYNES TAYLOR, JR.

Distiller

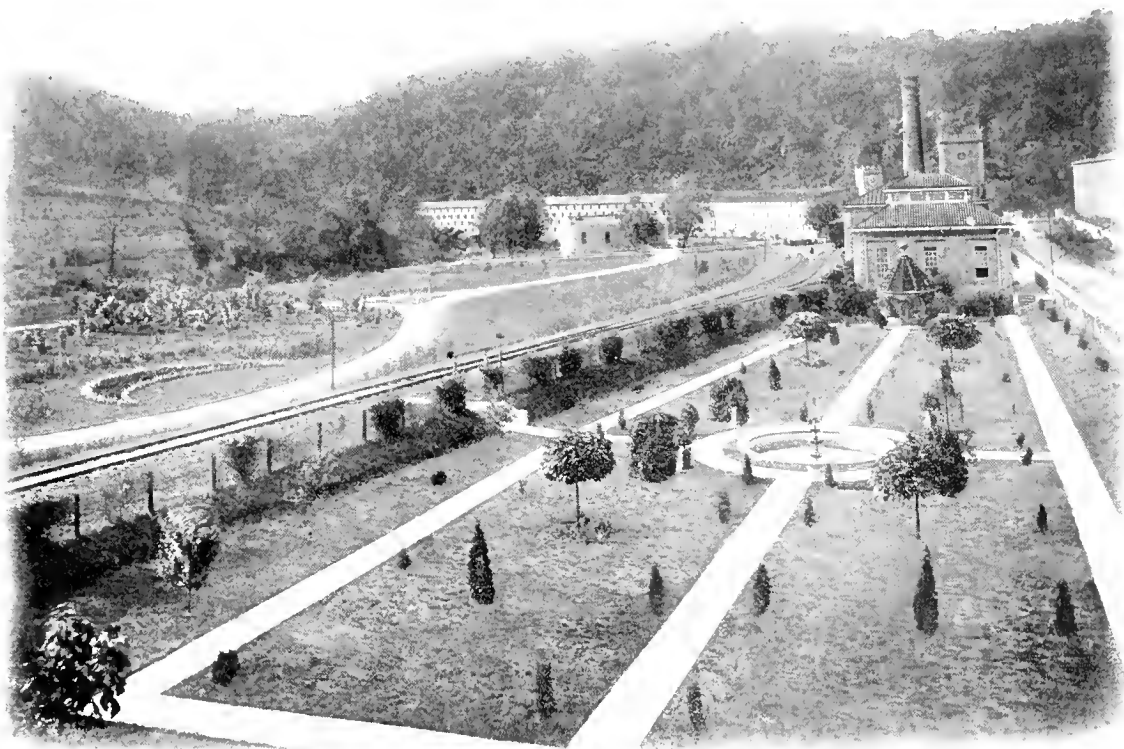

Born February 12, 1830, at Columbus, Ky., son of John Eastin and Rebecca (Edrington) Taylor. His grandfather, Richard Taylor, Jr., was Government surveyor of Jackson's Purchase. Richard Taylor's father served with distinction as Commodore of the Virginia Continental Navy during the Revolutionary War. Of the ten brothers all were officers in the army and navy. Col. E. H. Taylor, Jr.'s, ancestry is traced back to James Taylor, who came over from Carlisle, England, in 1658. Among James Taylor's descendants are notably President James Madison and President Zachary Taylor. John Taylor, of Caroline, Edmund Pendleton, the noted jurist, and others famed in history. Col. E. H. Taylor's early training was received at Boyers' French School, Conti street, New Orleans, La., the foundation of which was fortunately laid in a good education and personal discipline under that master of the art, B. B. Sayre, of Frankfort, who was not surpassed as an educator in Kentucky. Amongst his classmates at Mr. Sayre's were United States Senator George Graham Vest, United States Supreme Court Justice John M. Harlan, S. I. M. Major, etc. After leaving school he entered the Branch Bank of Kentucky, at Frankfort, Ky., under his uncle, Edmund H. Taylor, cashier. At the age of twenty he opened the Commercial Bank of Kentucky's books at Paducah, and also the books of its branches at Harrodsburg and Versailles, becoming cashier of the Versailles, Ky., branch. Shortly afterwards he founded the private banking house of Taylor, Turner & Co., which was later succeeded by Taylor, Shelby & Co., at Lexington. In the early sixties he organized the firm of Gaines, Berry & Co., distillers, and in 1868 organized the great firm of W. A. Gaines & Co., and built the Old Crow and Hermitage distilleries, at Frankfort. In 1874 he also rebuilt and operated the Oscar Pepper Distillery, near Frankfort, in conjunction with his ward, James E. Pepper, son of Oscar Pepper. In 1869 Col. Taylor built the O. F. C. Distillery, near Frankfort, and later organized E. H. Taylor, Jr. Co., and built the Carlisle. While engaged in these different distillery enterprises Col. Taylor was making an ultra fine whisky on the famous site of the Old Taylor plant, which was cumulatively gathering the Taylor reputation. In 1886 he disassociated himself from all other distilling interests and organized the firm of E. H. Taylor, Jr., & Sons, confining his distilling operations exclusively to the Old Taylor plant, which is recognized as perhaps the finest distillery plant in the world. Col. Taylor in recent years founded Hereford Farms, Woodford County, Ky., which he owns, and has made Kentucky the home of the most celebrated Hereford herd in this country. He was Mayor of Frankfort, Ky., for seventeen years. Served as member of the Kentucky Senate, succeeding United States Senator William Lindsay without opposition when the latter was elected to the Federal Senate. Aside from being president of E. H. Taylor, Jr., & Sons, distillers, of Old Taylor, Frankfort, Ky., and owner of the Hereford Farms, Woodford County, Ky., noted for the celebrated $12,400 Woodford, and for the greatest imported Hereford bulls now in America, Col. Taylor is also owner of Thistleton Farms, Frankfort, Ky. Married Miss Francis Miller Johnson. Has three sons, J. Swigerit, Kenner and Edmund W. Taylor, who are also associated with him in business. Col. Taylor is a member of the Chicago Athletic Association, Saddle and Sirloin Club, and Southern Club, of Chicago, Ill.; the Filson and Tavern Clubs, Louisville; Lexington Club and Lexington Country Club, of Lexington; the Kentucky State Historical Society, the Kentucky Thoroughbred Horse Breeders' Association, the American Hereford Breeders' Association, the National Geographical Society and the order of Elks. Address: Residence and office, Frankfort, Ky.

A MOONLIGHT SCHOOL.

The Letter below is from one of Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart's appreciative Moonlight School pupils.

Corrollton Oct 21, 1914
 Mrs. Cora W. Stewart
 Frankfort.

My Dear Mrs Stewart:
 I wish to thank you for the Moonlight Schools. I have been going six nights and have learned to read and write. I am forty three years old and have written my first letter to my mother, the next to you. I have enjoyed coming to school and have learned many things I never thought I would know.

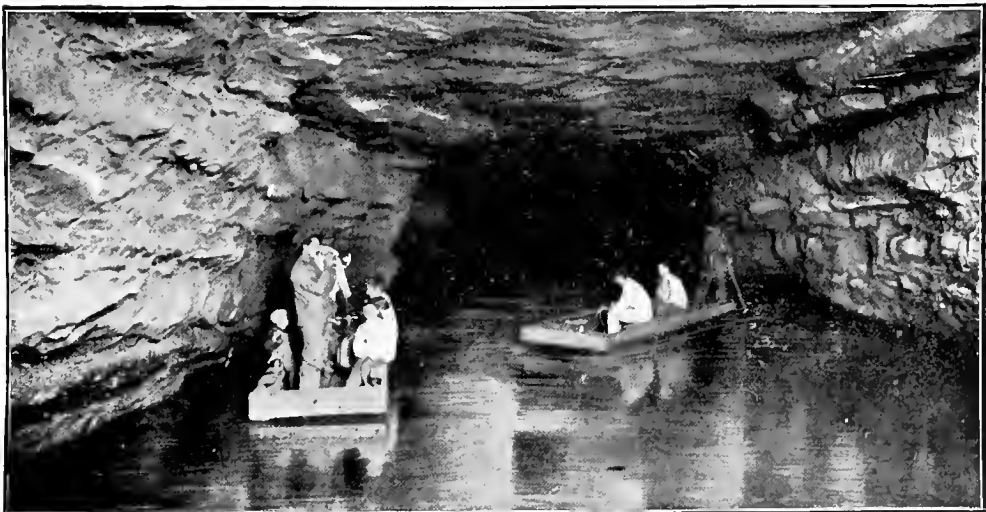

A gain I thank you and our Corrollton teachers
 Yours
 Amanda McKinney

The Moonlight School was founded by Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart in 1911, and first established in Rowan county, Kentucky. Its purpose was to afford an opportunity for illiterates, men and women, to learn to read and write. In 1914 the Kentucky Legislature created the Kentucky Illiteracy Commission to extend Moonlight Schools to all of the counties and to instruct all illiterates in the State. Soon Alabama, Mississippi and other States followed and created Illiteracy Commissions, and now eighteen different States have Moonlight Schools. In Kentucky's Moonlight Schools forty (40,000) thousand men and women were taught to read and write in the years 1914 and 1915. In North Carolina's Moonlight Schools 10,000 were taught in 1915. Through this institution Kentucky has hopes of reaching the aim: "No illiteracy in Kentucky in 1920."

KENTUCKY SCHOOL FOR THE BLIND LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY

Miss Susan B. Merwin, Superintendent.

Kentucky established her School for the Blind in 1842, being the eighth of its kind in this country. Its work is strictly educational and it is in no sense an asylum or home. Every blind child in Kentucky, or any child whose sight is so defective as to prevent its attendance at the public schools, may here get an education. The age of admission is from six to eighteen years, and no charge is made for tuition or board. The average attendance is about one hundred and thirty. The course of study includes kindergarten, grammar and high school work, thorough musical training, industrial and domestic arts and such vocational opportunities as may help to make its students happy, useful and independent citizens of the Commonwealth. There is a separate building for colored children, with its own set of teachers but under the same management.

CENTRAL UNIVERSITY—COLLEGE OF DENTISTRY,

Louisville, Kentucky.

The institution is organized on such improved lines as to leave no question about the position the college will maintain in dental educational circles.

Much time and thought is given to the teaching of technique and theory by a strong faculty, experienced both as teachers and as practitioners. The quantity and class of patients presented for treatment, with the careful attention in the practical department, adds much to the completeness of the college course.

It is the purpose of the institution to so equip its students that they may practice dentistry according to the present approved ideas of the profession. Each student has modern equipment, chair, cabinet, fountain cuspidor, electric switchboard, with gas, electricity and compressed air.

There is no business or profession that offers better opportunities than those to be found in modern dental practice.

The profession is occupying a front position in the consideration of thoughtful men as a future vocation.

Regular sessions from October to June.

W. E. Grant, M. D., D. D. S., Dean.
